Q: Can I programmatically change the content of the app cache manifest in WinRT? So I have a WinRT app that is configured to support offline data; the offline data is stored in two files as described here. One file is kept in the app cache directory, and the other is kept in the app data directory. The problem I have is that the app is looking for the offline data file inside the app cache directory; by default, this is the app manifest. Therefore I need to either: Change the app manifest (and only the app manifest) in the app cache directory so that it matches what's stored in the app data directory, or Have a mechanism to change the app cache manifest inside the app cache directory, once I have loaded the project. Do I have any options for either of these, at build time? A: You cannot programmatically change the contents of the cache directory itself. I believe what you are asking to do is purely a code/build time task and therefore cannot be done in WinRT. If the cache directory cannot be changed, then the only option is to move the offline data file out of the cache directory and into the appdata directory. Leading the Fight for Equality Today, the ACLU of Rhode Island is pleased to host Christina Tosi, Executive Director of the

What's new in Elden Ring:

• Your Greeting from Staff Based on these fundamental features, we would like to introduce our original fantasy RPG A Touch of Evil which developed through close cooperation between us and the legendary Japanese production house TOSE. When crafting the setting we felt the mix between WESTERN style and Japanese folk such as SCUFFLE HAT or SEKIGAHARA'S NAMAMONO. We wanted to express the power of ancient monsters while ultimately trying to capture the aesthetics of today's youth who would love a fantasy that could give them a sense of adventure. In an effort to further challenge our target audience, we intended to develop a game of the highest quality. We hope you enjoy it as well...We appreciate your support! P.S. If you wish to purchase additional goods, we will of course take this into consideration.

Battle the ArenaNet PvP servers in Battle for Atlas! FROM THE P.O.V. OF A BRANDON Gentlemen... For the past two years I have had the pleasure of running the Combat Operations research and development team. My life consisted of long nights poring over combat reports, trying to find answers to questions only a few understood. My tools were equations and diagrams and charts and graphs and my imagination. I had always been fascinated with the science of war. My vision of conflict has always been that of the weapons of war. I took a big step in my life the day I made the decision to retire. After two years I'm going back to my first love, the science behind combat. I've been given a chance to work with the Sandbox department on the dark side of the Force. When I took this job they told me my job was to be a part of the story of Atlas as it evolves. I've always had the greatest respect for the Sandbox department. While my team was busy arguing with each other about the dangers of
