What's new in Fruit Clicker:

v0.2.75.8 review - clicker games for the iPad Note : For Mac users, I recommend downloading the Mac version (linked at the bottom) of Fruit Clicker, not this article. Not sure if the Mac version is compatible with later versions of iOS. I added "H A P P E R" (multiplayer) a couple weeks ago and it worked great, but I didn't have a full review. Hopefully this one has everything you need to know. Here's a quick list of useful tips: After you play for long enough, all fruits will shrink a little each day. Chances of winning rise slowly every day. If you hit a specific amount in a day, you're guaranteed a *juicy pear*. Once you get a juicy pear, you won't get another one for the next 7 days, until you get a "sweet apple". Each game can have up to 3 puzzle pieces on a matrix which represents a potentially possible area of the world map, where the fruits are on. You start off with 0 pieces. To build your game, you have 5 directions (North, South, East, West, Diagonal), each with 4 pieces total. That's 16 pieces total. With 8 players online, that's 24 pieces. Each piece has a number of pockets which is there to represent how easy it is to harvest the fruits inside. The side of the pocket where you harvested the fruit has a number to represent how much xp you get. Every day you can pull the fruit out of a pocket and harvest it. You get the fruits in order of difficulty. Without getting too complicated, here's the formula I use to calculate what your score will be after a game: Integer fruit chanceMultiplier (# daily)First fruits are bonusInteger xpMultiplier (per fruit)You score is equal to the final number entered, less the total percentage of fruits harvested*c + 1 *c can be up to 3 if you don't get all the fruits in the game. This isn't shown on the screen. The beta version of this game was released 4 years ago, initially released for the iPhone. It was noted as being good at the time. I bought it right away because of the concept, because I'd found a concept that was too good to miss.
