Specify the version of .Q: Calculate values of my child components from my parent component I have parent component with a state. Now I want to get some values of it in my child component. I can do it easily by parent component will pass value to its child. But I have scenarios where I don't want to pass value to its child. A: You're looking for a callback. So, you can use the callback, and it will execute on the child, and pass a reference to the callback into the child. This callback could then forward the information along. Here's a fairly basic example: class App extends Component { constructor(props) { super(props); this.state = { value: null }; } handleCallback = () => { console.log('hello, I see you. no-op'); // Execute code in child on callback this.setState({ value: null }); }; render() { return App ; } } class ChildComponent extends Component { render() { return {this.props.value}; } } You can see a complete code example here. # Anaphora Removal in EfficientNet When EfficientNet is used for a closed-world object detection task, it is common to see a large portion of the output with either incorrect or unreadable tags which partially cause the object detection task not to work well, as well as the long training time and high memory consumption due to EfficientNet's memory-

O. Kuntze). The effect of light quality on growth and polyphenoloxidase activity of high-catechin commercial tea (Camellia sinensis (L.) O. Kuntze) was investigated. Adult plants grown under fluorescent light (FL) produced green tea, while those grown under incandescent or cold white fluorescent light (CW) produced black tea. At two different light levels (100 and 300 micromol m⁻² s⁻¹), the maximum polyphenoloxidase activity of polyphenol oxidase assay (POD) of CW-grown plants, was 1.12-fold higher than that of FL-grown plants. FL-grown plants had a significantly higher total catechin production (59.6 mg L⁻¹) compared to CW-grown plants (32.7 mg L⁻¹), and CW-grown plants showed more catechin epimerization. At the maximum catechin concentration, CW-grown plants exhibited a significantly higher proportion of (+)-catechin (45.8-61.1%) than FL 648931e174

This is done by binding a datatemplate, to a viewmodel that gives me back the information I want to display. I would like for it to highlight search results as you type, like when searching for a document in a word processing program, so that you can see what the cursor is on. How do I do this? Thanks! A: You can do it, check this:
