Cutaneous lymphocyte-associated antigen (CLA) was demonstrated by indirect immunofluorescence with a monoclonal antibody (OKM5) on cryostat sections from normal skin and in 26 cases of cutaneous T-cell lymphoma (Sézary syndrome, mycosis fungoides, and lymphomatoid papulosis). In normal skin, CLA was present in the dermis in the region of the blood vessels and eccrine sweat glands. In all three types of cutaneous lymphoma, the number of CLA-positive cells was similar to that in normal skin and did not correlate with the severity of the disease. The immunohistologic demonstration of CLA may be a valuable aid in the differential diagnosis of non-Hodgkin's lymphomas in the skin.Brimstone Creek Brimstone Creek is a stream in West Virginia, and part of the Kanawha River watershed. The creek's name comes from the smelting of iron ore that produced a reddish-orange mineral known as "brimstone". The creek originates in western Wyoming County and flows east through Wayne County, reaching the Kan

| News - About GameDeckLauncher --------------------- DevHere's what's up guys and girls, I'm here with two new pages for you all, here's the first: First of all, you can see from this image that new content for University Halloween is almost here, also you could notice that there's some new textures, along with i'm sure some other nifty little additions. Weapon +1: it's a Grenade Launcher that shoots a freaking disco ball grenade, homing dangit, yes it's gonna kill you unless it misses. Details +1: it's a Grenade Launcher that shoots a freaking disco ball grenade, homing dangit, yes it's gonna kill you unless it misses. Nuke+1: it's a Grenade Launcher that shoots a freaking disco ball grenade, homing dangit, yes it's gonna kill you unless it misses. Detective Scale: this is the weapon that Detective had from the beginning of the game, this one shoots a creepy blast of green light, aims with the green indicators. Armory: it was Halo's first game and it's where you unlock your old armor pieces and you gain access to them in later games. Shooter Level: This is where you get access to your sniper rifle, you unlock it in Multiplayer -------------------- Second, just an update for some of you guys that the forums are still hosted on IGN, we thought it would be a more convenient place to go rather than having to search through pages, but as some of you know, the forum server keeps crashing when it's busy, so if you can't access the forums on the game the map editor and the launcher upload pages, just send me a PM to let me know. Also, if we are out of stock for a certain page, don't worry we are working on it, sometimes it takes a while to get the resources updated. See ya Dev Posted by On Friday, September 29th we launch a full release build of the mod which includes University spooky Halloween and Fright Nights events, new weapons, effects, lights, all new sounds, plus updated textures and a UI! What is GameDeckLauncher? GameDeckLauncher brings the Enhanced Graphics, sounds, weapons, and much more from the console version
