Brushes The _brushes_ in Photoshop are controls for the application of color to the images. Brushes are made up of individual pixels, and it's possible to change them in various ways using brush presets, which are the default settings. You can use these brush settings or create your own by modifying the default settings. The brushes are also color-based; for example, you can use the same brush to apply pink. When selecting brushes, be sure to select the Type layer for best results. In addition to setting the size, shape, and opacity of a brush, you can also adjust the following two settings: * **Contrast:** Controls the overall intensity of color used for the brush strokes. * **Blur:** Controls the degree to which the strokes on the brush are blurred. The blur effect adds a soft look to your images.
