The "home owner" program is up, the people should be working next week, and the backyard is going in. So needless to say, the house is in chaos (because this is how a house always is). The main problem, for me, was that the best friend from college moved with me and she stayed all night in the room by the front door because she's paranoid. I've been having a hard time keeping myself from obsessing over her every move, wanting to verify she's not a stalker, checking the house every 15 minutes, and what have you. (Please don't post this as a self-help message, I know where to find it.) I am not having very good boundaries. I went to the grocery store earlier today and got hungry. After a brief chat with my friend (because her room is just down the hall and I was
