Creating graphics files with Photoshop You may be surprised how you can create logos, charts, or other graphical files with Photoshop without having to learn any complicated graphics tools. Adobe provides a library of ready-made graphic elements that you can drag to your picture or to a new document in Photoshop, and you can also design from scratch using the Photo Filters tool (see Figure 2-5). You can also share files on other platforms, like the iPhone or iPad, as discussed in Chapter 15. FIGURE 2-5: You can create graphics in Photoshop using the Photo Filters tool. Graphic elements include tools such as shapes, people, frames, and arrows; they also include special effects, such as color gradients. You can also save your creations in layered PSD and GIF formats. Photoshop Elements is an excellent choice for graphics creation because it offers a more limited set of tools than Photoshop. However, it does have a few more useful tools for creating charts and icons and can even make a simple Web-safe GIF. To access the Photo Filters feature in Photoshop, click the Gallery button at the bottom of the window. You see a slider

In the end, I'm not really sure what made me finally have to finish this beast so it was time for him to finally lay with his brother (to, as you can see, great and wondrous delight of Teddy and Garfield). The front end of this is done with the standard square white cardstock you used for backdrops in this series. Even though the image used here is a little bigger, the process doesn't differ very much, so I'll focus on the stuff that did change. The front is a white box, with the words "The Fun Starts Here" written on it in block lettering. Over that is a 6x12 mat that I used to cut the image out of. I then filled it with a white/creamy colored styrofoam cup, which you could leave clear and open the styrofoam pot, or blow up into a solid form of foam that can be used as an alternative to foam core if you wanted to. Next, I made a frame for the front of this with a pair of 6x6 frame squares that I punched out to give it a little shadow around the edges. Again, this could be clear and open, or filled with foam/styrofoam. The frame around the outside left edge was cut out of foam, which for those not into scrapbooking, is exactly what I mean. As you can see on the right side in the photos, I used a stand to hold it up. In this frame I used a 6x6 felt cardstock frame template, glued into place. The back consists of a 6x12 mat of white cardstock. I used this to piece together a door for the back. I cut the door out of white cardstock, then painted it with the same brown that I used on the backdrop for the front. The door hinges are pieces of white cardstock with a dot on them, and the doorknob was also cut from the same cardstock. As for the door, for the opening I wanted to make sure to make the round edge with the mat, so I used the "border" around the mat as a guide. From this point on it was pretty simple. I just traced around the opening in the mat, and then cut it out with a craft knife and straightedge. I made sure to do this before I put in the door. You could also use foam board or styrofoam sheets to do this.
