We are a small indie team with experience in audio and visualization / auralization. We know what we are doing and we know how to bring you the best VR experience. We make sure that by default, there is no disturbing audio in the game. We have built the game in a way to allow you to experience the "soundscape" in any way you wish, from headphones to 4-speaker setup. The soundscape is the perfect complement to the beauty of the visuals. The other key elements are the ephemeral patterns of lights and patterns in the color. This is a combination of the finest, real graphics and sounds, resulting in a relaxing and enthralling experience. So relax and enjoy! What's new in A Lullaby Of Colors VR:

 – Early Access This is both an Early Access Game and an Update for the New Disintegrations release to coincide with its 2nd anniversary. Early Access is not for profit. In other words, if you like the game you can get it and enjoy it without any concern for my income. The code is free. All that is available is for sale is some special in-game objects – like the lovely necklace that my girlfriend loves so much and which will bring a smile to any dreamers face. Caveats Caveat Emptor - you should be able to use pretty much everything you purchase in the game. To test this, I recommend first playing with a hard-coded coffee mug in the kitchen. The sort you would use in a vending machine, only it has your name and Facebook login info written on it. If the coffee mug is destroyed, you could file a claim with your social media network and it would really suck for me if I ended up in court over it. Disintegrations At first glance, Disintegrations appears to be a rawkus mix of the dawning of the civilized age on a world at peace with itself, the birth of the Post-Civilization age, the rise of the information age, and the evangelism of the first humans on the dry coldness of the ground. These topics are tied together through the sort of knowledge Adam and Eve acquired via the prompting of the first parents to become present to the Trinity and to begin exploration, forever changing their relationship with all other life until the inevitable design for a new species ended chaos and revealed the first logical harmonies. Hidden Connections The relationship between that first species and their creator, an entity not necessarily known as God but thoroughly described as incredibly kind with immaculate attributes and more revealing than our imagination can encompass, created a state of existence for life called the Garden of Eden. From this Eden, there came forth a pair of Adam and Eve who were granted a new relationship with God. This renewed relationship brought with it a renewed relationship with all other species. This has also been made clear in a post that I agree to not re-publish in detail for the same reason why I will never spoil the ending to the original game – because it's not mine to spoil. This new relationship brought a new moral code to life. This new code, though, is entirely arbitrary and tacked onto the nature of being that life
