Detaching an action from an internal button I have a view controller where I want the user to be able to delete a selected row in a table view. When the user presses the delete button in the action, it opens up a modal view that asks for confirmation before deleting. I can handle the deletion in my view controller, but I also need the delete button to have a "Done" label above it. The issue is that when I remove the "Delete" button from my storyboard, the "Done" label goes away too and now there is nothing there to confirm the user's decision. I don't want to remove it from my storyboard as I want to be able to control how it looks. Does anybody know how I can remove the delete button from my storyboard so that I can use it as an action and still have the "Done" label above it? A: Put the UI element above the button in the storyboard. Your view controller should still receive touch events for your button. Make sure your button is connected to an IBAction in your view controller. Then, in your button's target action, which is the IBAction, you can check the storyboard and show/hide the "done" label by checking whether the table view is selected or not.

MyButton.addTarget(self, action:
    #selector(MyController.buttonHandler(_:)),
    for:.touchUpInside) func buttonHandler(_ sender: UIButton!) { // Show the done label if the button's sender is the select button. if sender == MyButton {
