The story of Handel and Boccherini is interesting. Handel was introduced to the Marquis of Pescara by the famous English actress of that time, Mrs. Oldfield. So we can imagine a scene between her and the Marquis, with Handel as a third person present. At the time, Handel had just arrived from Italy, and the marquis wanted him to set up his new opera company with the help of his opera singers, who were young and talented. Given the situation, it is no wonder that Handel felt a bit of sympathy for a young man who had fallen into a bad world of singers and cunning agents. This original text inspired many other works of art besides Handels three stage productions. These include yet another operathis one by Antonio (The Four Seasons) Vivaldias well as certain scenes in ShakespearesMuch Ado About Nothing. Vivaldi was a polymath, and this work is no exception. Like Handel, Vivaldi was adept at both vocal and instrumental music, with especially popular was his sophisticated use of the latter. A young violinist left four piano concertos in which Handel found favour: Three of these were basically cadenzas, but the fourth is one of Handels great showpieces. It contains in the first part, an excellent counter melody to which Vivaldis violin writes symphonically before the main theme of the second part returns A few months later, on the night of the 24th of December 1738, he was working on oratorio Giuseppes E minor. Handel, barely recovered from the death of his son, received a note: Demetrio di Somma, a court musician, begged him to conduct a mass for the dead. In the end the illustrious maestro agreed, and composed and performed this powerful oratorio on the spot. The opera is a true masterpiece - one of the most important works of the entire age of musical sophistication. It stands at the heart of Baroque opera - a truly epic composition and one of the greatest works of music ever written
