Also, I get the feeling I can do this kind of transferring from Memory Stick PRO Duo drive to the CF card. I then re-attempted to transfer the Database from the E: Partition to the A: Partition. I had tried this twice before with positive results, but when I tried this time, I could not even get close to the successful outcome I had seen in the past. I even went so far as to start Pervasive Studio 7 (for the first time in months) and attempt to do this again from inside Studio. It took a long time to transfer and I was suspicious I would get no successful results at all this time.

if you are getting a status 161 when you have a valid license installed, then you are most likely exceeding the number of allowable connection attempts. to confirm this, start the psql monitor tool, select the microkernel/resource usage menu item, and look at the connection attempts line in the resulting dialog. verify that the maximum value matches the expected license count. (a mismatch could indicate a version problem.) then, verify that the peak is hitting the maximum value. if so, then you have these options: the license exceeded error message can occur for two reasons: there are too many existing workstations running the database. you can access the number of workstations connected to the database by using the psql monitor utility and selecting the microkernel/resource usage menu item. to verify that there are enough licenses available, see the license count entry in the dialog box. there is an improper connection between the client and the database. to determine whether the connection is faulty or not, see the psql monitor utility and select the microkernel/database connection menu item. you can try the following troubleshooting steps to try to determine the cause of the license exceeded message: if you are having trouble getting into psql v11, contact your pervasive representative. make sure you have installed the psql client utility on the psql vx server. to install the psql client utility, perform the following steps: start the pervasive psql v11 installer, and verify that the license is found. if the license is found, then the installation process will complete. if the pervasive psql v11 installer fails to complete, then you will need to go to step 6. start the psql monitor utility, and then select the microkernel/resource usage menu item. the licenses line of the dialog box will provide the number of licenses that are installed. in this example, the license count is 5. you can click the add license button to add a new license. if you have reached this point, the new license is added, and you can click the update license button to get the software installed. 5ec8ef588b
