at wayne's party, robin suggested that batman form a new team of bat-family members to prevent crime in gotham. the team was eventually named "the bat-family" and consisted of bruce, tim, selina, dick, alfred, and commissioner gordon. batman started working more regularly, at first, with the bat-family. in his first "regular" case, batman followed a strange breadcrumb trail to the el dorado docks, where he discovered that the series of robberies were being carried out by a weird little man named riddler. after batman foiled riddler's latest plan, the riddler sent his goons to try and kill him and robin, but batman gave robin a tip to foil them. after a series of robberies, the riddler managed to pull off a much bigger heist, and the bat-family was hired to stop him. batman was finally ready to make his final stand against the riddler. batman tracked down the riddler's hideout and battled him in his lab, which was disguised as the museum on blackgate, but was in fact a hideout. batman was able to trap the riddler, who screamed out "freeze!" as his body went up in flames. the bat-family recovered the other riddler's key, revealing that the riddler was a mad scientist named dr. hugo strange, who had been experimenting on the riddler's victims, to make their murders as unnoticeable as possible. bruce wayne hired a psychiatrist to determine the riddler's true identity and discover what had happened to the riddler's victims. dr. hugo strange put batman under a hypnotic sleep and tried to mind-control him into killing batman's family. batman confronted strange and saved tim, alfred, selina, and dick from a band of goons that he believed were behind the riddler murders. batman defeated strange, who stated that the next victim would be alfred. strange also attempted to mind-control bruce, but batman was able to resist the hypnosis.
