Q: Castle Windsor: InstancePerLifetimeScope without scope key I am trying to implement a Singleton which has dependencies on other Singletons without specifying a scope key. For example: public class Foo : IFoo { private static Foo currentInstance; public static Foo GetInstance(Guid key = Guid.Empty) { // if key is not provided, retrieve the current instance if (key == Guid.Empty) { if (currentInstance == null) { currentInstance = new Foo(); } return currentInstance; } // else if it's present... if (currentInstance == null) { currentInstance = new Foo(); } //... and then just return it. return currentInstance; } } I could simply add a setting that picks up the current scope in the constructor of the component and then return the same instance from all the other components that need this singleton as their scope is same. But I am hoping to avoid explicit settings. So my question is, can I use the InstancePerLifetimeScope without specifying the scope key? A: Yes. You can specify the type explicitly. In your
