The main use of the iPad is as a light work tool that is the perfect compliment to a desktop IOS device, and less likely to replace it all together. I personally use Photoshop for rendering but I rarely use my iPad because of it's small screen, lack of optical zoom ability and VGA display. However, I'll use my iPad when traveling for non-rendering tasks like web design, and editing and sharing of pictures and editing of video. Toolbox is a podcast that shows you how to use the most useful software in a practical way. Today, Steve from Toolbox shares his thoughts on Photoshop, and why he prefers to use it on the desktop instead of on his iPad. Steve explains why Photoshop on the iPad is just not a good match and has some good advice on how you can adapt your workflow to become more productive even if you work on an iPad! Using the web to fund and track your content creation is a great way to make things more efficient. This new funding model was built in the interest of streamlining workflow, yet can be used in your own way. The Crowdfunding website Create Adobo combines crowdfunding and adobe ecosystems in a powerful way. The Create Adobo platform provides expert instruction, video tutorials, and advanced training as well as access to all of the tools, extensions, and resources you need to bring your vision to life. Adobe is not following any kind of trend for a short term gain. It is trying to make a long term strategy to fill the gap in its product line. Adobe has been consistent and their ads and videos are making me wary of putting my faith in the company in such a way that I'm badly burned if things go bad.

The features are something that you need to add to your toolbox. They keep you far ahead of the rest. I am stating that they are really great tools and some of them are as good as the tools of other applications that are included in the same House. This begs the question, are these the best tools? Use them to make your life absolute easy. You can't afford losing the opportunity of this feature. Whether it is a site or marketing material, there will always be the need for these features in production. You should have all the tools and features ready for production. You should know beforehand what you are going to work on. So make sure you have them before you start putting into production. Equally important, you need to make sure that you are equipped with the right software and the right knowledge. You should always be learning something. So, you are going to find yourself as a student in this world. Be it Photoshop, Adobe InDesign, or some other tool, you will always be learning something about new ways of producing information. Research online. There are lots of resources where you can land for help and even for inspiration. Join Photoshop social media communities. There are many groups that will help you. So, no matter how creative you are, you are bound to learn something new. You have to understand Photoshop as you could never understand any other software. The workflow of the software itself is something that you need to learn first. You can't just figure out the workflows on a go. You have to understand them first. You could not be able to do your own bridge work and figure out the interface while using Photoshop. You will not be able to predict where everything is or will be when you are editing. So, understand the workflow before you put in the work.

Photoshop has a few wonderful features that are designed to help you get the best out of the ailing software. However, they come with a cost, so make sure that you understand what you're getting into before you apply one of them. Instead of a standard "snap to grid" feature, Photoshop CC has a vector snap grid tool, which provides much more accurate placement. It also has a new automatic vector snap tool that recognizes any existing paths in the image and automatically snaps to them. And it also includes a new smooth brush tool that can create a series of short paths across an image for an intricate drawing effect. "Quick Mask" is a new tool that makes it easier for Photoshop users to mask out areas of a photo or graphic, without having to trace out the edges of a selection. One simply applies a quick mask that automatically fills any empty areas inside the selection. Depending on the project, colour is one of the most important elements of any image. If the image is a portrait and the lighting and background is consistent then the back-lit colour will be the key element. This is the most important in changing as it appears the most natural. However if the image is a landscape and includes plants or buildings, an over-exposed halogen lighting system or any other colour, be it blue skies or a halogen white background, will make it look like there is a white background when in fact there isn't. For this reason, consistency should be the predominant element in colour schemes.
